THE EMPIRE STATE.

Chairman Quay Thinks It Is Safe for Harrison by 15,000 Plurality.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. New York, Nov. 3 .- Everybody is an arith metician and prophet to-night. The electioneering is over, and from now until Tuesday will be occupied mainly by the anxieties and perplexities of prediction. There is no man better qualified than the chairman of the national committee to forecast the result, and to Chairman Quay your correspondent went for an inter-

"The surety of Harrison's election," he replied, "hes in the simple fact that to defeat him the Democrate must carry New York, while we could elect him without New York. Thus you see why interest centers in New York, and why the Democrats feel desperate about it, while are complacent. In view of the very meagre majority for Cleveland in this State in 1884, and the going over of many thousands of Democrats to Harrison or the protection issue, I do not see how the people on Twenty-ninth street," by which he meant the Democratic national committee, "can brace themselves up with any hope at all. Of course, just as we have, and they must know, as we do, that the State is won for protection. You desire my prediction in figures! It is that Harrison and Morton will carry New York State by 15,000. I base that upon the most careful and conservative reports that we have been able to get. We find that we shall not lose much by she Prohibition defection. Indeed, we shall gain heavily by it, if we figure from the Prohibition vote of four years ago, for it will not be half as much this time. It is my confirmed belief that outside of New York city and Brooklyn General Harrison will have 75,000 majority, and that in these two cities Cleveland will not get above 60,080, leaving 15,000 for the good."

The auxiety that remains to the Republican managers relates to frauds on election day. I may be common enough to fling charges of trickery, and ordinarily they do not mean anything, but this time proof can be adduced that the Republicans are willing to insure fairness all around, while the Democrats are not Your correspondent is told by the private secretary of Colonel Quay that an offer was formally made to co-operate with the Democrats in measures that would have positively precluded fraudulent voting of any appreciable amount. The Republican committee sent one of its members to Chairman Brice, of the Democrats, with authority to say that the Republicans would contribute $50,000 toward a fund of $100,000 for the prevention, detection and punishment of false registration anywhere in the State of New York. The matter was taken under advisement by the Democrats for a week, and at the end of that time an evasive answer was returned to the effect that such an arrangement, although desirable, would probably prove impracticable. It was asked, for instance, into whose hands the money and its management could be placed satisfactorily. Colonel Quay replied with three propositions. Firstly, he would place the whole job in the hands of Pinkerton's detective agency, which would conduct it in a business-like manner, detailing pleat; of detectives for the work. Sec ondly, if the police commissioners would consent he would intrust the enterprise so far as it concerned New York city to Chief Detective Byrnes, of the police department. Thirdly, he would agree to the formation of a special commission, composed in any fair manner of men above suspicion of partisanism. He added that he would accept any scheme under which $100,-600, contributed in balves by the opposing committees, should be expended, or so much of it as might be necessary to secure a perfectly honest ballot. All these overtures were rejected, It was then that Colonel Quay made independently the offer of rewards for the detection of fraud, and deposited $25,000 in a bank to secure payments. This would seem to show that one party is willing to abide by the genuine vote on election day, while the other doesn't mean to. The one city in the State long notorious for open and flagrant Democratic dishonesty at the olls is Troy. The election machinery, the police, the justices' courts and almost every other means of punishment for criminals are in control of a Democratic ring, the boss of which is Edward Murphy, jr., now chairman of the Democratic State committee. Colonel Quay's proposition for joint action was referred by Brice to the State committee, and there it was dealt with by Murphy. It was to his adverse decision that the rejection of the plan is attributable. It would seem to be clear, therefore, that Murphy does not intend to relicquish whatever advantage may be obtained for his party by the usual Troy methods.

rank who doesn't look it, but is so port and dignified that the door-keeper at any headquarters would bow him politely into the presence of the chairman, has been going the rounds with a measure preventive of repeating at the polls. On getting the ear of the chairman he blandly remarks that he has devoted much time and thought to devising a means of detecting men who vote more than once in a day. Then he is interestedly invited to unfold his discovery. He does it. It consists of branding the brow of each citizen when he deposits a vote. It would not be an indelible mark, except for about twenty-four hours, but during that time he would bear conspicuously the proof that he had made one visit to the polls. The inventor isn't particular as to the exact process, but he thinks that a rubber stamp, and ink that would stay where it was put for at least a day, would serve the purpose. Then all the inspectors would have to do to guard against fraud would be to make each voter show his forehead

"The political managers are all fossils," he said, after getting thoroughly discouraged. "Not one of them could say a word against the practicability of my device, and yet not one would have anything to do with it. They only laughed."

Cleveland's particular newspaper in this city has gone to pieces. The revival of the Star. which had been kept somewhat vigorously alive by John Kelly by means of Tammany money and influence, was suspended after the death of that politician. Its resuscitation was due to the late ex-Governor William Dorsheimer, an intimate friend of Cleveland, and it was designed to be an authoritative administration organ. The evidences of White House favor were plenty in its pages. It expressed the views of Cleveland, and your correspondent happens to know that many articles were written for it by Daniel Lamont, presumably upon the order of the President. But the venture did not pay in a business way. Although a boom was made, and a fair circulation was reached, this advance toward prosperity proved transient. Dorsheimer sunk all the money he had, and that of a coterie of Cleveland's personal friends, who had invested it, it was understood, at his request. Then Dorsheimer died and Collis P. Huntington, the California railroad millionaire, began to make good the weekly deficits. It is a theory in newspaper circles that he meant to secure the favor at Washington for his railway projects by maintaining the presidential organ here. He bore the expense for nearly two years, and is believed to have lost $400,000. But he withdrew soon after the renomination of Cieveland, owing to either the costliness or some disagreement. Then the Democratic national committee got a hint from Cleveland, and from week to week paid the difference between the receipts and expenses of the Star. That arrangement was expected to last until election day, but when the Democratic party split in two over the local campaign, and the management of the Star cast its fortunes with the County Democracy, Tammany fought back. The foreclosure of a mortgage out the property of the Star into the hands of Sheriff Grant. who is the Tammany candidate for Mayor, and, of course, forced things to a crisis for a retaliation. The concern was sold out under foreclosure this week, and that is the end of the Star as an administration organ. A Monster Parade of New York Business Men.

To the Western Associated Press. NEW YORK, Nov. 3 .- Lower Broadway was the start of the Republican parade of business ing about. There were good reasons for know-

men. The weather was much the same as that | ing that Harrison would get New Jersey's nine of last Saturday, when the Democratic business steadily from out of leaden skies, but this did not seem in any way to dampen the ardor of the paraders. Inspector Williams was present in command of a large force of police in lower Broadway to start the procession and keep a pathway cleared for its course. Promptly at 1 o'clock the procession moved, with Grand Marshal C. B. Mitchell at its head. Ten mounted police officers cleared the way. The grand marshal and his aids, all mounted, followed. The rain continued, and, with the mud on the streets, walking was laborious. The American flag was omnipresent in the ranks of paraders, and on the buildings and windows along the route of the procession multitudes of people thronged the route. Crowds of sightseers stood on roofs, in windows and door-ways, and cheered the different organizations as they passed, and the paraders frequently joined in. Many of the paraders were on horseback, men whom nobody ever saw astride a horse before. Among them were such well-known business men as C. B. Mitchell, C. B. Watrons, W. F. Schaeffer, Jos. M. Hazeltine and F. B. Rich. At the head of the precession was a line of policemen, who served to keep the crowd back from the street and permit the paraders to march without being impeded. Then came the marshal and aids, and immediately behind him came a string of horses in double line, drawing a truck bearing the model of a steamship. The vessel was intended to represent the Dolphin, which was at first declared to be unacceptable to the government, but is now considered one of the best vessels in the navy for coast defense. Alongside the model were seventy-five men in seamen's uniform. They came from the docks of the Ward line of Havana steamships and carried a banner inscribed: "The Democrats killed John Roach, but his spirit goes marching on."

One of the most striking and unique features of the parade was the appearance presented by the Americus Club, of Pittsburg. There were 375 men in line, headed by the G. A. R. Band of thirty pieces, of that city and each man paid his white hats, and each carried an umbrella, around the outside of which was the stars, the ribs were alternately red, and blue, thus making national flag. When they wheeled out of Liberty street to take their place in the parade behind the Philadelphia clubs, they were preceeded by a standard inscribed "Pennsylvania is at your back." At a given signal the umbrellas were raised and opened, creating a decided sensation. The strangers were cheered incessantly as they passed along Broadway. When the Wall-street business men swung into Broadway from that street, headed by the Seventh Regiment Band, there was a big shout from the crowd that lined either side of the street. First came the Coffee Exchange, followed by the tobacco manufacturers. Every

Each man carried a cane to which was attached a small American flag. When they wheeled from Wall street into Broadway, with perfect step, they were loudly cheered They were evidently favorites, for as they passed up the street they were greated with cheers from all points. Then came the members of the Consolidated Exchange, the other associations filing into Broadway trom Wall street being the Produce and Maritime exchanges, the custom-house brewers, the Cotton Exchange, the A. and the Coal Trade. Then came the others in the following order: The Lawyers from Pine street, the insurance men from Cedar street, and machinery and railroad-supply men from Liberty street. Next were about 200 men, all carrying at "shoulder arms" canes in which were mounted red white and blue plumes. Behind these came the jewelers from Maiden Lane and the wholesale drug, chemical and paint trade; the hide and leather trade; the wholesale boot and shoe trades; the bardware trade; West-side Merchants' and War Veterans' Association; the paper and associated trades; the booksellers and stationers; the carpet and railway and steamship trades; dry goods, and Columbia College students; umbrellas and parasols; central division dry goods, batters, furriers and straw goods; wholesale milliners; gas-fixtures employes; East-side business men; building materials: Uptown Business Men's Association; New York University students and the dental students. Above Chambers street the scene beggared description. Crowds obstructed the sidewalks and the windows of the tall buildings on both sides of Broadway were filled with spectators. In Chambers street, and for many blocks above. marching clubs waited for over two hours after the head of the procession passed before their right was uncovered by the organizations starting farther down town. In fact, the extreme left of the line was not in motion until after 5

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed all along the line, excepting in the vicinity of the New York hotel, where, on account of Mrs. Blaine, ir., who lies there ill, the music and cheering was silenced. Here and there in the bewildering display of stars and stripes and Republican insignia were occasional Democratic decorations of bandannas, papers bearing Chinese characters and pictures of President Cleveland. The paraders flaunted their little American flags and hissed the bandannas and groaned at the portraits of the Democratic candidate. Turning into Waverly place, the column found the same waiting throng. The windows of the university, so far as they commanded a view of the parade, were radiant with pretty faces and resplendent with patriotic decoration. Up Fifth avenue the column moved, passing the headquarters of the national Republican committee, where the cheering was intense. The headquarters were decorated and the banners bearing the portraits of the candidates waved over the cheering thousands. If possible, the crowds increased as Twenty-third street was neared, and there, about the reviewing stand and in all available points of observation, people crowded each other. From the handsomelydecorated stand at the edge of the park, Messrs. Warner Miller, Hon. Levi P. Morton, Col. S. V. R. Cruger, and Gen. John C! Fremont reviewed the parade from the reviewing stand, at the

by their splendid marching and general demeanor, aroused the enthusiasm of the spectators at the reviewing point, and they were given many a rousing cheer. In truth, this club seemed to carry off the honors for individual club display. Fred Douglass experienced some difficulty in gaining admission to the grand stand. Mr. Whitelaw Reid was one of the interested spectators on the reviewing stand. Hon. James G. Blaine watched the pageant from one of the windows of the Fifth-avenue Hotel. He was surrounded by Colonel Coppinger and his family. The party seemed more than pleased at the vast throng of Republicans congregated in and around the vicinity, as well as the martial appearance of the paraders. Mr. Blaine expressed his regret at not being able to go to the reviewing stand. The work during the week, together with the fact that he has to speak at two meetings in Brooklyn this evening, forbabe him mingling in the excitement. It is estimated that at least 50,000 men participated in the parade.

While approaching the reviewing stands, broker Wm. J Osborne, one of the paraders, dropped dead and was borne away. Shortly above the reviewing stand the parade was dismissed. The last company passed the stand at 7 P. M.

IN NEW JERSEY.

The Republicans May Lose the State, but It Doesn't Look That Way Now. epecial to the Indianapolis Journal

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 3.-The canvass closed in New Jersey with the Republicans very hopeful. Not since the Greeley campaign of 1872 has the outlook been brighter. Chairman Hobart, of the Republican State committee, said to-night that the Republicans would carry the State by at least 2,000 plurality. He expressed himself in the most positive terms on thronged with people this afternoon to witness | the subject, and said he knew what he was talk-electoral votes. All the Republican leaders men paraded. The rain came pouring down seem equally confident. Your correspondent has not the strong confidence of the Republicans, but a careful canvaes satisfies Republicans have the that inside track, and will win. They have conducted a better campaign from the start. The conversions among the workingmen are certainly remarkable; then, the drop in the Prohibition vote is fairly astounding. The chairman of the State Prohibition committee has nothing to say. He makes no claims, and acts as though dissatisfied with the outlook. Other Prohibitionists blame Gen. Fisk for his apathy and neglect of the campaign. The loss in the Prohibition vote alone ought to give the State to Harrison; but, in addition, another favorable sign has appeared during these closing days of the contest. Ben Butler has a great many friends among the Democratic workingmen. They gave him nearly 4,000 votes four years ago. Most of these men had about determined to vote for Cleveland. Since Butler's strong speech out West, however, urging his friends to support the Republican ticket, they have flocked over to Harrison by the hundreds. They will cut a noticeable figure in the result on Tuesday. The Democrats are thoroughly frightened. They have stopped their loud boasting. Chairman McDermott, of the State committee has reduced his figures considerably. A week ago he said Cleveland would get 11,000 plurality. To night he only claims 7,000. He is unable to compute how he can get any plurality at all. Democrats are relying, here as elsewhere, on fraud and boodle. They hope to cheat the ballot-boxes in the Horseshoe distriet of Jersey City, as they did in the Haucock campaign. They also expect to spend thousands of dollars among the floating voters. Urgent appeals have been made to the national committee during the past few days, and a substantial response was the result. But the Republicans are on the alert, and will checkmate all fraudulent attempts. The canvass most assuredly terminates with the Republicans ahead. They have a good lead on the home stretch, and ought own expenses. The men wore tweed suits and | to be victorious. They may be beaten, but it doesn't look that way. They may not get the plurality Chairman Hobart calculates on, but any plurality will constitute a noteworthy However the State may go for President, the Republicans are sure to make congressional gains. Germans Carefully Watch and Note the Tone of French and Italian Papers. Copyright, 1888, by the New York Associated Press. BERLIN, Nov. 3 .- Apart from the elections and the popular attention necessarily evoked by the Emperor's visits to Leipsic, Stuttgart, Munich and other places, much interest is evinced in the recent anti-German outpourings of the French and Italian press. While the people of Berlin treat these as perfectly comprehensible outbursts of French spleen, they do not for a moment regard them seriously. Yet it cannot be gainsaid that newspaper polemics overstep the verge of discretion, especially in view of the strained situation between historic enemies. Whatever the powers may do to insure the continuance of peace, their efforts are sadly discounted by the systematic efforts of the French nation and press to irritate public feeling. The Liberte, in the course of a two-column article, rakes up the Schnaebele incident, the Raon L'Etape shooting affray, and the passport regulations, and bolsters up the charge against the Germans of rank barbarism; while the language employed towards Germany's ally, Italy, far exceeds the limits of legitimate controversy. The inevitable tendency of such an ill-judged press crusade, at a time when the maintenance of peace is at the mercy of any chance incident, is evident to the Berlin people, who feel that if war is to be averted it is necessary for the French press to adopt less blatant tactics. It was the press, primarily, which was for the catastrophe of 1870. It has now adopted a similar course, and unless a stop is put to the systematic inflating of the public mind the same resuits may be expected to follow. The tone of the partisan organs is all the more ill-judged, because many Germans may visit the Paris exhibition next year, and unless the incitings of French public prints against Germany be abandoned, the heat of public feeling may lead to neidents which will ultimate in a casus belli. The Havre incident was finally settled to-day. The escutcheon was replaced over the German embassy in the presence of the German consul, the chief commissary of police and the sub-prefect of the department. The ceremony was quietly performed, in the presence of about Things That Displeased Emperor William, Copyright, 1888, by the New York Associated Press. BERLIN, Nov. 3 .- The Reichsanzeiger, in its issue to-night, states that the Emperor William's recent re ply to the Berlin municipal committee, in spite of the unmistakable clearness of its meaning, has caused some misleading and malicious misrepresentations in a portion of the Berlin press, particularly in the freethinking and the ultramontane organs. It appears plan, to misrepresent the bearings of the Emperor's statements. The Emperor commands it to be exofficitly declared that it was the spirit and the matter of the free-thinking journals which wounded his feel-ings. His Majesty had concluded, from the relations in which the municipal committee stand to this portion of the press, that they were in a position to bring about a cessation of those statements which elicited his Majesty's censure, and would also be disposed to lo so in accordance with the sentiments they expressed in their address to the Emperor.

Almost every member of the imperial suite received contusions. Twenty-one attendants were killed and thirty-seven were seriously injured. One of the injured persons has since died. The Czar, after the accident, picked up a portion of a rotten sleeper and handed it to a gend'arme, with orders to

The work has been greatly puffed in Berlin, and its evident aim is to counteract and correct some of the contents of Emperor Frederick's diary. It also revives the anti-English feeling which prevailed in the Prussian camp during the Franco-German war. It appears, though brought into considerable notoriety by means of advertising, to consist principally of extracts from newspapers and other publications, and is not likely to exercise a lasting influence upon the FORT WAYNE, Nov. 3.—Congressman Boutelle, of Maine, was interviewed this evening as he was passing through this city, en route for home, having finished his canvass in Indiana. To your correspondent he said: "Indiana is surely safe for Harrison and Morton by from eight to fifteen thousand, certainly not less than the former figures. The people of Indiana are wide awake and thoroughly informed on the vital issue, the tariff. Everywhere I find politics the sole absorbing topic of conversation. I have been in nearly every railroad center of any importance in this State, and I find that an overwhelming majority of the railroad men are for Harrison and Morton. There can be no question as to how Indiana will vote. Before coming to Indiana I was pretty well over the State of New York, and I am not oversanguine when I say that New York will undoubtedly give Harrison a majority of 20,000 to 30,000 votes. I do not speak from reports received at second hand, but from observations taken on the ground.

HOW THE DUNKARDS WILL VOTE.

They Believe in Virtue and Sobriety and Will Therefore Support General Harrison. Special to the Indianapolis Journa.

WABASH, Nov. 3. - To verify the published report that the large majority of the German Baptists (Dunkards) in Indiana would support General Harrison at the approaching election, your correspondent to-day visited North Manchester, the center of a populous Dunkard settlement. Mr. Lautzenheiser, an influential member of the church and a wealthy business man, said that the statement was true with the exception that there are "not more than ten thousand of the sect in Indiana." The brethreu, he said, took no interests in politics, and seldom voted. This year, however, they had become alarmed by the boldness of the attack on protection, and at least four-fifths of all the members of the denomination in the State would vote. There is a small sprinkling of Democrats in the church, but the number will not exceed 10 per cent. The Dunkards have also a warm personal admiration for General Harrison. They are great sticklers for virtue and sobriety, and the character of the Republican nominee challenges their earnest support. In 1884 there were probably not more than fifty Dunkard votes . ere cast in Koscuisko, Wabash and Huntington counties, but this year the vote of the brethren will run up into the hundreds. Mr. Bowman, another Dunkard and business man corroberated the views of Mr. Lantzenheizer, and expressed the belief that the Dunkard vote would constitute no unimportant factor in General Harrison's election. The Republican managers in the north part of this county have made a canvass of the brethren, and assert that there will be a heavy Dunkard vote polled, and it will all be Republican, members of the church having promised to come out without further notice and support Harrison. Most of them will also vote the Republican ticket clear down.

KOKOMO, Nov. 3 .- The Kokomo Republicans closed their campaign to-day and this evening with the most wonderful political demonstration ever seen in Howard county. At noon a grand industrial and political parade began to move, and for two hours the column rolled by. Fully 25,000 people were in the city, and probably one-third that number in the parade. In the afternoon speeches were delivered by Stephen A. Douglas, Colonel Robertson and Congressman Cheadle. In the evening E. H. Terrell and A. J. Beveridge spoke. To-night a torch-light procession two miles long paraded the street s of the city. The great demonstration surpassed all expectations, and leaves the Republicans in fine form for the great triumph to be won on Tuesday.

Hon, John M. Butler at Rockville.

Special to the Indianapolis Journey ROCKVILLE, Nov. 3 .- Hon. John M. Butler, of Indianapolis, spoke in Rockville to-day, to a large crowd. He made a masterly speech for the cause of Harrison and protection. This is the last demonstration of the Republicans before the election. The will get down to hard work and look after the voters from now on. The Republicans are thoroughly organized and on next Tuesday will see that only local voters cast their ballots. Every vote will be polled and an increased majority may be expected from old Parke county.

Closing Rally at Wolcott.

Secial to the Indianapolis Journal WOLCOTT, Nov. 3 .- The last rally of White county was held at Wolcott, to-day. The town was filled, two or three thousand people being present. Col. A. T.
